

Media Ethics & Integrity

Windstream is committed to conducting business in a manner that is ethical and expects every employee to be honest, fair and respectful, particularly in dealings with the news media. This commitment reflects our core company values – accountability, collaboration, agility and respect.

The Head of Corporate Communications is responsible for ensuring all internal and external communications are accurate and ethical. All news releases are approved by the respective business units and Legal prior to dissemination to the public. In addition, the company's external reporting group reviews financial information for accuracy prior to publishing externally.

The Corporate Communications team monitors media ethics performance and coordinates with Legal to respond to any grievances related to media ethics issues.

Windstream's Working with Integrity guidelines includes additional information on Financial and Public Reporting.

