

Windstream launches new business blog

Technology blog provides simple, real world explanations to complex communication topics that impact businesses of all sizes and industries

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 15, 2010 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Windstream (Nasdaq: WIN) announces the launch of its new business blog, designed to provide businesses with helpful articles and updates on the hottest topics including cloud computing, data centers, voice and data services, MPLS networking, reducing communication expenses and selecting a new communication system.

Blog posts, found at www.windstreambusiness.com/blog, are written by a panel of communication experts with decades of experience in the industry and provide useful information on how businesses can utilize advanced communication solutions to operate more effectively and productively.

The Windstream Business Blog establishes another forum for two-way communication between customers and Windstream and can facilitate the exchange of ideas between customers.

"Windstream prides itself on serving as a technology partner with our customers, and the Windstream Business Blog is one way we can have a conversation with our customers about trends in next-generation communication solutions," said Don Perkins, vice president of business marketing. "Through social media, we can explain complex technology topics that allow customers to make decisions on technology solutions for their business."
