

MGM Resorts Named One Of America's Most Reputable Companies For Corporate Social Responsibility By Reputation Institute

10/1/2015

LAS VEGAS, Oct. 1, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- MGM Resorts International (NYSE: MGM) has been named one of America's top 100 most reputable companies for corporate social responsibility (CSR), according to research by Reputation Institute, a leading global source on corporate reputation.

Reputation Institute's top 100 list is derived from data collected by the 2015 U.S. CSR RepTrak®, a public survey examining the perceptions of companies by the U.S. general public. Involving more than 55,000 interviews during this year's first quarter, U.S. CSR RepTrak® measured companies according to three dimensions: citizenship, workplace, and governance.

"Consumers want to engage with companies that are good corporate citizens," said Brad Hecht, Chief Research Officer at Reputation Institute. "Companies with high CSR scores in our research can point to a demonstrated track record of ethical behavior and leadership."

Among the other companies named to Reputation Institute's list include: Google, Levi Strauss & Co., Panera Bread and Starbucks. MGM Resorts is one of a few companies in the hospitality industry to make the list.

"We are delighted to be recognized by Reputation Institute, and the general public, for our commitments to social responsibility," said Jim Murren, Chairman and CEO of MGM Resorts International. "Our CSR efforts make us a stronger company and a better corporate citizen as we seek to inspire our guests, employees and host communities through everything we do," continued Murren, a CR Magazine 2013 winner of the Responsible CEO of the Year Award.

Reputation Institute's RepTrak® database is normative, examining 15 stakeholder groups in more than 25 industries and more than 50 countries for more than 7,000 companies.
