HIGHLIGHTS

- Ford Motor Company's October U.S. sales totaled 192,616 vehicles, representing a 3.9 percent decline
- Ford's overall average transaction prices reached record levels of $\mathbf{$ 3 6 , 8 0 0}$ in October, up $1,400 from last year. This compares to an industry increase of just $$ 330$ per vehicle
- As America's best-selling brand of trucks, SUVs and vans combined, sales of these Ford products totaled 150,900 vehicles in October. Year-to-date, Ford trucks, SUVs and vans posted sales of 1,605,967 vehicles this year - up 2.1 percent
- Ford F-Series surpassed 70,000 trucks sold for the eighth consecutive month in October, on sales of 70,438 pickups; the decline versus year-ago levels is largely the result of fleet timing. Year-to-date F-Series commercial fleet sales are up 12.8 percent
- Ford SUVs posted a 7.9 percent gain last month on 62,175 vehicles sold, for the best October in 16 years
- Sales of all-new Ford Expedition totaled 3,623 vehicles last month - a 74.7 percent jump over a year ago, while Ford Explorer results were up 12.5 percent on sales of 19,034 vehicles
- America's No. 1 seller of vans saw total van sales of $\mathbf{1 7 , 3 5 3}$ units, a gain of 4.9 percent for the month
- Hot demand continues for the all-new Lincoln Navigator; overall sales were up 70.0 percent on a rich mix of high trim series vehicles
